Course Description

Contemporary Operations Management demands flexibility, creativity and pragmatism. This online programme enables students to grow into Senior operations management roles in technology-intensive organisations, in manufacturing, in supply chain management, the financial sector or services organisations, in both the public and privatesectors. This level 9, postgraduate programme is provided through online distance learning, which means that students can achieve a deeper understanding in a specialist area and provide a sound basis for their long-term career, without disruption to their career or other commitments.

Key Areas of Study

Students will gain a critical awareness of current problems and new insights associated with operations management in high technology manufacturing and services environments. They will also develop new business skills and be able to apply these to a variety of contemporary challenges. The programme is designed to provide graduates of different disciplines with a unique opportunity to develop the hybrid, interdisciplinary knowledge and skills considered essential for modern business development and management. Participants will also develop the range of investigative and analytic skills and techniques required to equip you to assume managerial or senior roles within your organisation, both in the public and private sectors.

Subject Areas Include

- Service Operation
- Operations Strategy
- Management of Operations

Successful graduates may apply to complete dissertation to gain a Masters qualification (not not funded by Springboard).
